Report on World Statistics Day Celebrations

As part of the global celebrations of World Statistics Day 2025, the Department of Economics, Government Degree College Kangan, organized a seminar and poster presentation on 18-10-2025 on the theme “Quality Statistics and Data for Everyone.” The event aimed to highlight the importance of quality data in contemporary society and encourage students to explore the critical role of statistics in decision-making, policy planning, and sustainable development. The occasion witnessed enthusiastic participation from students across disciplines, who actively engaged in both the seminar and poster presentation activities.

Several students shared insightful presentations on topics including the legacy of Professor P. C. Mahalanobis, widely regarded as the father of modern statistics in India; the importance of World Statistics Day and how it emphasizes the role of official statistics in decision-making; and the significance of quality data in the age of Big Data and Artificial Intelligence. The seminar provided a platform for students to express their understanding and reflections on the relevance of statistics in contemporary life. Their active engagement reflected a growing awareness about the value of data in building transparent and accountable institutions.

In addition to the seminar, a poster presentation was conducted where students creatively visualized the significance of statistics and data. The posters reflected themes such as the accuracy and timeliness of data, data for all communities, ethical data use, and innovations in statistical tools and technologies. The visual displays were not only artistically engaging but also intellectually stimulating, offering a powerful complement to the seminar discussions and enriching the overall academic experience.

The event was marked by a presidential address delivered by the Principal, Prof. Sadaf Nazir, who commended the students for their commendable efforts and acknowledged the faculty's unwavering commitment to academic excellence. The proceedings concluded with a formal vote of thanks by Dr. Mohammad Shahid Zaman, Head of the Department of Economics, who expressed sincere gratitude to all participants, faculty members, and the college administration for their valuable support. The successful organization of the event underscored the department's dedication to fostering a culture of intellectual inquiry, academic engagement, and enhanced awareness of the critical role that statistics plays in contemporary society.

Overall, the celebration of World Statistics Day 2025 at Government Degree College Kangan was a resounding success. It enhanced students' awareness of data literacy and highlighted the power of quality statistics as a tool for change, inclusion, and informed decision-making in today's world.
